Club profile

“Peloteros” is a Spanish soccer club with a history spanning over 25 years. In 1997, its current director Jose Luis Pérez Mena, in partnership with sports delegates from the province of Seville, started a project that would change this region’s soccer landscape. By bringing together the 21 towns that comprise Seville’s Southern Sierra under one roof and banner “Peloteros” was created, one of Southern Spain’s most successful youth soccer clubs.

As the select club in the region, “Peloteros” has many teams competing in “division the honor”, Spain’s top youth soccer division. It has also developed many talented players who’ve made the jump to professional soccer. To date, there are over 50 “peloteros” – a colloquial term translated as “baller” – who have played in one of Spain’s top three tiers. Most famous among them, Ansu Fati, who sported the green Peloteros uniform for 3 seasons before moving to Seville F.C.

The club's impact has also reached well beyond the field, taking on a number of social causes, such as environmental responsibility, education, and prison outreach. The club has been recently recognised by the State Department for its outreach efforts in prisons. Another example of community involvement is "Peloteros Cup", a youth tournament which has put Seville's Sierra on the soccer map, highlighting not only its soccer talent, but also its natural beauty and cultural heritage.

"Peloteros" is excited to invite United Football Academy to share in a week of soccer training and cultural enrichment, under the banner of diversity and respect for the game!
